Emotions Can Affect Accident Tendency

avoid walking around the front of a truck. The man explained that he had avoided walking in front of trucks ever since he had been hit by a truck as a child.

In another case, an employee who was annoyed at his helper's carelessness overlooked a safety precaution himself in handling some chemicals. Although an accident did not occur, a violent explosion could have resulted. When interviewed, the employee said:

"I was so mad with the helper, I knew something would go wrong. I guess the strain was too much for me waiting for him to do something wrong so I went ahead and did it myself."

In another instance, a man fractured a finger while working on a machine and explained he was still "burned up inside" after an argument with his wife the night before.

Dr. Rogg concluded that "individuals do become emotionally charged under some circumstances in a manner that may predispose them to accidents."

PULMONARY EOSINOPHILIA—F. P. Incaperra. Amer. Rev. Resp. Dis.—Vol. 84:730 (Nov.) 1961.

A case of pulmonary eosinophilia with the results of steroid therapy is reported. Long-term therapy is recommended in view of the frequency of relapses, whenever therapy is required.

This beautiful, heated swimming pool highlights the spacious lawn and recreation area at Camelback Hospital. Other outdoor activities include volley ball, ping pong, shuffleboard and badminton, all under the supervision of a trained therapist. Those preferring restful relaxation may enjoy a quiet conversation in the beautiful lawn and grove area with its scenic mountain backdrop.

Located in the heart of the beautiful Phoenix citrus area near picturesque Camelback Mountain, the hospital is dedicated exclusively to the treatment of psychiatric and psychosomatic disorders, including alcoholism.
